Had President Cleveland turned very Republican out of office, no harsher sentiments against his Administration would have been uttered by the Ohio Republican convention. We copy an article in anothe column from the Chicago Herald upon the degeneracy of politics in Ohio under Fostered Republicanism and Coal Oiled Democracy. It will be recognized at once that the Herald knows what it is talking about. We had hoped that an inscrutable providence which had permitted the State of Ohio to escape destructive cyclones, earthquakesand had stayed the ravages of cholera for so many years would direct the affairs of men and things so that we would be permitted to escape another campaign without such patriots as Charlie Foster waving the bloody shirt in the face of the well the manipulators in both parties, so far as lie in their power, will leave the great two evils. ON THE WING. On the Road-Hall Storm-Fishing at Reservoir—Familiar Faces-Under False Colors at the Soldiers' Home.

FRIEND TIMMONS:—If your space will admit, and these notes caught on the wing suits your critical eye, they are at your service for publication or the waste basket.

I struck Lima just after the great hail storm on the first, which no doubt most of the readers of the Journal have read of.

The storm was very severe in Allen county. I talked with several farmers in that yieinity and one told me that before annual measure, compel attention to their convicinity and one told me that before sunrise on the morning after the storm, that ed two hundred pounds or more. Garden truck was all cut close to the ground. The

The next place visited was the handsome little town of Celina. This is the location of the great Reservoir, the feeder of the Erie canal which covers 70,000 acres of ground. It was constructed in a low vallev and embankments put across each end. The average depth is ten feet. They catch some of the finest fish here. It would delight our piscatoral artists, such as Will Jennings, W. F. Pomeroy, E. A. Higgins, etc., to land black base that weighed three and four pounds apiece. I had a little leasure here and one of the old residents forward men and measures for which they invited me to accompany him. I went can cheerfully vote and work? Time being up I had to go to the train and the next stop was at Pleasant Hill. I met one of our old town-men here, Mr. Holler, who at one time kept valoon directly across the street from the Journal office. No doubt many remember him. Mr. Holler has gone out of the saloon business and is working at his trade, that ot tailor, and is doing well. It was also here that I first met the seventeen year locusts, which has been prophesyed would be on earth this season. They were about the size of a large horse fly, and the bushes and grass was covered with them. They were in a dormant condition. Arrived at Dayton, and after a comfort-

Arrived at Dayton, and after a comfor-she night at the old Phillips, started early for the Soldiers' Home, where I spent the forencon. Here I met a few of our old soldier boys—J. J. Don't Like Ohio Politicians.

(Chicago Herald.) These pestiferous Buckeye politicians are at it *gain. Their election does not occur until October, yet the Republicans are already in the field with candidates, and the Democrats will speedily follow. These fellows are forever posing before the country, demanding that notice be taken of their antics at a time when the sensible elector is congratulating himself that the business of politics is to have a long reat. With precious few exceptions these Ohio

Farmers gested to Okio that it hold its elections like other States the politicians in both camps in Buckeyedom rejected the innovation with frank confession that it paid them too well.

It is an impertinence at this time to denand attention to the doings of these small beer politicians. Their platform of platibeer politicians. Their platform of plati-tudes isn't worth a glance. Mr. Foraker is a bore. T'other feilow when nomina-ted will be found to be another bore. The whole crowd active in Ohio politics are cheeky and inconsequential. The trumped up turmoil in that neck of woods isn't worth consideration, save as it becomes necessary for sober and sensible North Americans to give the prin-cipal actors the cold shoulder.
